Medicaid Providers Play a Critical Role in COVID-19 Vaccinations

In December 2020, the first two COVID-19 vaccines, Pfizer (BNT162b2) and Moderna (mRNA-1273), were approved by the FDA and recommended by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) for emergency use. Initially COVID-19 vaccine was in limited supply and each state identified priority groups receiving COVID-19 vaccine based on CDC recommendations. Since initial approvals, vaccine supply, recommendations, and distribution of vaccines have evolved rapidly.

Currently, there are three COVID-19 vaccines approved for emergency use in the United States: Pfizer (mRNA), Moderna (mRNA), and Janssen (JNJ-78436735; viral vector). The Pfizer vaccine is approved for use in individuals 12 years of age or older. Both Moderna and Janssen are approved for use in individuals 18 years of age or older. Each vaccine has been proven effective at preventing severe disease, hospitalizations, and death.

Now that COVID-19 vaccine supply is more readily available, Medicaid providers have the ability to administer the vaccine to their patients. Hospitals and emergency departments are in the process of updating

- Quality metrics to hold health plans accountable
- Intensive services to address the health and social needs of women with high-risk pregnancies, individuals with serious mental illness or substance use disorder, and young adults who are veterans or were formerly incarcerated or in foster care

An educational webinar about ARHOME can be viewed here. <https://afmc.org/health-care-professionals/arkansas-medicaid-providers/policy-and-education/webinars/arhome-webinar-july-2021/> ■

PCP Caseload Management

Arkansas Medicaid PCP Caseload Management Responsibilities

Most Medicaid clients and all ARKids First-B participants must enroll with a primary care physician (PCP), also known as a primary care case manager (PCCM). PCPs provide primary care services and make medically necessary referrals to specialty physicians, hospitals, and other providers. PCPs coordinate and monitor their clients' prescribed medical and rehabilitation services. Medicaid enrollees may receive services only from their PCP unless their PCP refers them to another provider, or unless they access a service that does not require a PCP referral.

Each PCP may select an age range for the Medicaid clients who can be assigned to their caseload. Each PCP may also choose an upper limit to his or her Medicaid client caseload, up to the default maximum of 2,500. In certain situations, the state may permit higher maximum caseloads.

Arkansas's Medicaid expansion program, Arkansas Works, expires at the end of 2021, and the Arkansas General Assembly has approved the Arkansas Health and Opportunity for Me (ARHOME) program to replace it. ARHOME will continue using Medicaid funding to purchase private health insurance for eligible low-income adults. ARHOME will add new features, including:

- Quality metrics to hold health plans accountable
- Intensive services to address the health and social needs of women with high-risk pregnancies, individuals with serious mental illness or substance use disorder, and young adults who are veterans or were formerly incarcerated or in foster care
